When tradition meets innovation – The ARMIN STROM Mirrored Force Resonance, now with handmade guilloché dials

After the great success of the inaugural rose gold limited edition, followed by a visually technical stainless steel edition, ARMIN STROM's most innovative piece to date, the Mirrored Force Resonance, will now be offered to collectors with superb, hand-executed guilloché dials, creating an outstanding synthesis of tradition and innovation – two values dear to the brand.

New handmade guilloché dials for the Mirrored Force Resonance

ARMIN STROM makes an elegant return to traditional craftsmanship, with the introduction of exclusive guilloché dials. Creating a striking contrast with the high-tech movement, the guilloché dials will be available in multiple colors (blue, black, anthracite, red or bi-color), and in several different pattern options (sun-ray, concentric waves or barleycorn), depending on the client's wishes.

To ensure the best visual result and the highest level of quality, ARMIN STROM has teamed up with Master Watchmaker Kari Voutilainen for the creation of these guilloché dials. They are manufactured in his Môtiers-based workshop, on century-old engine-turning lathes, which can only be controlled by hand. The intricate patterns, obtained by chiseling a smooth metallic plate with extreme precision and care, are true pieces of art, reflective of the craftsmen's skills and virtuosity.

Considering the complex production process of these guilloché dials, an extra cost of CHF 5,000 will be applied to the standard retail price of the ARMIN STROM Mirrored Force Resonance.
