

HARRY WINSTON®

Ultimate Adornment Timepiece

An allegory of refined luxury is blowing gently over Harry Winston's workshops, where the exquisite jewelry and watchmaking house is paying tribute to feather art and to Cluster, the three-dimensional setting invented by Mr. Harry Winston. This famous setting technique enables a combination of brilliant, pear and marquise-cut diamonds in a burst of spontaneous asymmetry.

In the Ultimate Adornment timepiece, precious stones are further embellished through being juxtaposed with the voluptuously fascinating and majestic elements produced by nature.

With its delicate silhouette, the Ultimate Adornment Timepiece lovingly entwines 191 diamonds around a long, slender neck, magnificently dressing a woman skin with the quintessence of charm and distinction. The case, composed of 16 marquise-cut, a single pear-cut and 42 brilliant-cut diamonds, falls in perfectly free, shimmering harmony.

The hours and minutes of a romantic, elegant time are seductively counted off on a dial with a gleaming iris, while the peacock, with its silky elegance, lends its graceful plumage to embellish the piece.

This dazzling work of art from the Harry Winston Ultimate Adornment collection, can be worn as a brooch or a pendant, and is composed of 62 carats of diamonds and 14 feathers. The brooch twirls and pivots to form a splendid fanned shape composed of gossamer-light feathers. Rimmed with stones forming a flamboyant diadem of 26 marquise-cut, five pear-cut and 10 brilliant-cut diamonds, the piece gracefully spreads like the wings of a gentle bird poised for flight.
